

Marketing Major

Department of Management & Marketing

*School of Business Administration
University of Montana
Missoula, Montana*

2017-2018

Greetings from the Marketing Faculty!

We are excited you are considering marketing for your major. These next few semesters of your college career could hone your marketing skill set so you can land that dream-job after college. This will involve hard work and dedication on your part. It will entail delivering relevant, engaging and challenging courses on our part.

Together, we will continue a legacy where our marketing graduates provide significant value to the companies and organizations that hire our students, from large, well-known multi-national corporations such as Google, Apple, Kraft and Nike to local start-ups such as Gigeo, to nonprofit organizations and service companies such as Sustainable Business Council, ATG and St. Patrick Hospital. The sky's the limit with a sophisticated marketing skill set, and we look forward to helping you unleash your potential!

Mission Statements

The University of Montana's School of Business Administration enhances lives and benefits society by providing a world-class business education in a supportive, collegial environment.

The mission of the Management and Marketing Department is to provide a professional educational environment that fosters excellence in management & entrepreneurship, marketing, and international business. The Management and Marketing Department's goals are to: 1) enable our graduating students to pursue meaningful careers and to make positive contributions to society, 2) enable our faculty and graduating students to serve as resources for other stakeholders, including businesses and other professional organizations, both domestic and international, and 3) maintain and develop faculty excellence in teaching, research, and service."

What is Marketing?

"Marketing is the activity, set of institutions, and processes for creating, communicating, delivering, and exchanging offerings that have value for customers, clients, partners, and society at large."¹

Marketing's fundamental goal is to satisfy customers' needs. It is a broad field involved in every aspect of the product lifecycle. Accordingly, an impressive set of skills is cultivated by marketing majors. As a marketing major, you will understand consumer behavior, product development and market research, the psychology behind purchasing decisions, and effective methods of getting products and services to customers.

Characteristics of Marketing Majors

- Effective communicators
- Strategic thinkers
- Problem solvers
- Motivated
- Innovative
- Creative
- Energetic
- Team-oriented

Opportunities in Marketing

Opportunities for marketing majors are as varied as the field itself. Every organization—for-profit and non-profit alike—cares about creating customer value, and marketing is an integral part of this process. Marketing departments are increasingly able to quantify their value within businesses with the use of analytics and market research. The explosion of information technology has changed how firms use data to understand and manage customer demand. The use of customer databases, loyalty cards and online shopping activity have created a wealth of consumer information, and offer advantages to both organizations and the managers who can evaluate and assess consumer preferences and consumption patterns.

Analyzing the needs and wants of potential customers, in order to create and deliver goods and services profitably is the cornerstone of a marketing education; as such, marketing students will always be in demand. People who are motivated, enthusiastic and able to adjust to the changing marketplace are prime candidates for top positions and rewarding careers in marketing.

Selecting Electives

Use your electives as an opportunity to supplement and enrich your business education. Do you like to be creative? Classes in media arts are a great fit for a career in advertising.

Are you a number cruncher? Classes in statistics or quantitative analysis add depth to market research. Interested in international marketing? Fluency in a foreign language is a major advantage in multi-national corporations.

Strong writing skills are important in every career. Take advantage of the many fantastic writing classes offered by The University of Montana. If you are unsure of your career goals, meet with a SOBA marketing faculty member for career advice.

Developing Your Exit Strategy: Career Planning

Don't leave your post-graduation planning until the last minute! It is never too early to start thinking about your career after college. Luckily, The University of Montana and the School of Business Administration offer many resources to help you develop a winning exit strategy.

Internships

Employers look for experience and professionalism, even from recent graduates. A great way to develop both is through an internship. Internships not only give you valuable work experience and elective credits, but also a start in building your professional network, and the opportunity to see your education in action. The UM internship office and SoBA's internship director can help you find an exciting and fulfilling work experience that will give you a competitive advantage in the job market.
